WILL BRING CHEAPER AND BET-TER BEER.

The funeral services over the remains of Bishop Kesler were need in the Sixteenth ward meeting house yesterday afternoon. The building was packed to its utmost capacity. The stand was draped in white, and just in front of the choir was a long table, on which were placed the beautiful floral offerings of relatives and friends.

The services were conducted by William Langton, second counselor to the deceased. The opening prayer was offered by George B. Wallace. The choir then sang. "Oh, My Father." President Joseph F. Smith was the first to address the audience.

He spoke very warmly of the deceased. "I thank God for a man like Bishop Kesler," he said. "He has gone to a peaceful rest, to Jola his friends on the other side of the vail, and let me say to his sons and daughters, follow the example of your father, in his integrity to God, and you will be saved in God's kingdom with him."

President Angus M. Cannon was proud to say he had known Rishop Kesler, for he knew him to be faithful homest and upright. "I don't know of any bishop who was more dutiful and more faithful than was Bishop Kesler, and lought in a detail the bishop was held. President Taylor spoke of the integrity of the deceased and related to any circumstances in which it was manifested; he would not yield to what he thought was wrong. The deceased was prepared to die, and he sank into his final sleep as cheerfully as only one can who has lived as Bishop Kesler in all cover the first of the sterling qualities of the deceased, and his devotion to dail, exceed who had any circumstances in which it was manifested; he would be greatly reduced many poor breweries would be closed down and all vied as Bishop Kesler into over the deceased, and his devotion to dail, resident to love the died of the could cannot be a deceased, and his devotion to dail, resident to love the died of the could cannot be a deceased, and his devotion to dail of the deceased, and his devotion to dail to the died of the could cannot be a deceased and his devotion to dail to the died years." he added, "and a purer-minded man I never knew. He was a man of God, high-minded and intelligent. He never shirked a duty."

The closing hymn, "Nearer My God to Thee." was sung by the choir in a very impressive manner. The closing prayer was offered by Apostie George Teasdale. The remains were viewed at the residence before the services, therefor the casket was not opened at the meeting house. A long cortege of vehicles followed the remains to the City cometery, where they were interred in the papers.
